PAF Participates in Several Czech and Slovak Summer Festivals

Press Release, 22nd of June 2011

The Festival of Film Animation is not just the four-day marathon of animation and visual arts that takes place every December in Olomouc. The festival, which celebrates its tenth anniversary this year, has become a feature-packed year-long project. That is why you have many more opportunities to meet the artists associated with PAF and watch the films shown at the festival in December and during the summer at other associated festivals and clubs. Following the eight-day festival presentation that took place in New York in May, PAF will also be introduced at the Slovak festival of film animation Fest Anča in Žilina and at the multi-genre open air festival Loony Bin. PAF will, of course, be a part of the Summer Film School in Uherské Hradiště and will be presented on four consecutive evenings.

PAF's first project for this year is the Břeclav concert of young glitch-hop and post-dubstep Czechoslovak artists Pjoni & Ink Midget, whose debut album was produced this year by PAF in collaboration with the independent Slovak label Exitab and the newly established Czech label f341. The duo from Bratislava's concerts are refreshed by spontaneous improvisation as well as by the extreme sensitivity of Ben Frost, who is visually accompanied by VJ Kolouch (MidiLidi). Pjoni & Ink Midget, VJ Kolouch and DJ Fool will appear in the Břeclav Piksla club on the 24th of June at 8 pm.
The next day PAF will move to Luhačovice. This is the second year of the three-day multi-genre festival Luhovaný Vincent, which takes place in the historical city and aims to present attractive young artists from a wide range of genres. "We concentrate not only on film festivals, but we also try to penetrate areas which enable a creative mix of art genres, as does the Luhačovice festival. "The festival deals especially with theatre, music and literature," the director of the festival Alexandr Jančík says about the short preview of the PAF and Other Visions selection that takes place in Luhačovice on the 25th of June at11:30 am.
At the beginning of July the PAF organizers will attend the Slovak festival of film animation Fest Anča which takes place in Žilina. Jančík describes PAF participation in the Slovak festival: "PAF collaborates with several associated festivals and at one of them, Fest Anča, we are going to present our festival. On the 1st of July we will introduce the Other Visions competition section. The popular format Pecha Kucha will follow in Žilina on the 2nd of July".
The summer programme will keep running with a presentation at the festival entitled
